

Academic Integrity Workshops

The Academic Quality Agency for New Zealand universities, Universities New Zealand and the New Zealand Qualifications Authority, in conjunction with the Australian Government Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency, are pleased to support the delivery of two Academic Integrity workshops in Auckland and Christchurch on the 4th and 5th February 2020.

4th February	9:00am — 12:30pm	Decima Glenn Room, Owen Glenn Building, The University of Auckland
5th February	9:00am — 12:30pm	Undercroft 101, Puaka James Hight, University of Canterbury

The workshops have been developed in Australia by a team of experts from the field, led by Professor Tracey Bretag from the University of South Australia, with Dr Guy Curtis, University of Western Australia, Dr Christine Slade, University of Queensland, and Dr Margot McNeill, International College of Management Sydney. The half-day workshops focus on how providers can promote a culture of academic integrity within their higher education institutions. Additionally, they will explore current practices available to providers to combat contract cheating and the challenges providers face implementing these practices. The learning outcomes from the workshops held across Australia in 2019 form the basis of an academic integrity toolkit, building on TEQSA's existing Good Practice Note: Addressing contract cheating to safeguard academic integrity.

Participants from across the tertiary sector are welcome to attend the workshops. There is no charge for attendance. However, space is limited so please register at www.aqa.ac.nz to secure your space. Please contact comms@aqac.ac.nz with any queries.
